

[Student Name]
Grade 7
Summary of Year, 2005-2006

[Student] attended classes at City Gates Academy, a “school” for homeschoolers. He took classes two days a week and then followed a syllabus to do his work on the other days. This year he took a full load of courses: Pre-Algebra, English literature and composition, science, and Medieval and Renaissance History. He also participated in gym class once per week.

He became very independent handling his assignments and keeping track of his papers and books. He consistently completed his work on time. He ended the year as one of only 4 kids (out of 40) who won an award for an A average in 4 or more classes.

[Student] played travel soccer in the fall, intramural basketball in the winter, and on two lacrosse teams this spring, leading his travel team to a first time championship win as the high scorer on the team. When he wasn't playing organized sports, he could be found in the street playing pick up street hockey, or in the yard playing football, or on a hike in the woods.

A long held dream of [the student's] came true this February. Our family adopted a dog from the Humane Society and she and [student] have been constant companions since. He is very responsible and takes excellent care of her.

[Student] still loves to listen to books on tape. He reads for pleasure only occasionally, I am sad to report.
